

“So, let us, in these next two years, men and women of both parties, every political shade, concentrate on the long-range, bipartisan responsibilities of government, not the short-range or short-term temptations of partisan politics.”

1983 State of the Union Address

Ronald Reagan

A Legacy of Putting People Before Politics

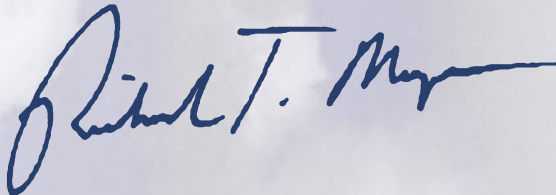

“Reflecting on Ronald Reagan’s tremendous contributions to our country, one of his most impressive attributes was his ability to put politics aside, and bring a diversity of people together, to accomplish the greater good.

As demonstrated throughout his lifetime, Ronald Reagan showed us by example that compromise in the pursuit of creating a better government does not mean compromising the conservative principles we share.

We live in uncertain times, and that lesson he taught us now has an even greater relevance, as the need for us to come together as a nation is greater than ever before.

While doing my best to help build the majorities we need to advance our conservative agenda, I’ve also held steadfast to the shared belief that people should always come before politics.

With your support, I’ll continue to unapologetically work hard to defend our conservative values, build an even stronger Republican party, and get the results you expect from your government.”
